WELCOME TO THE ISA FAMILY

As your student embarks on their study abroad experience, they will be surrounded by an experienced team of professionals to provide support throughout the study abroad process. We are pleased to introduce you to our ISA team as well as the roles we play in your student’s adventure. Through our combined personal and academic travels, we have gained an understanding of the challenges and rewards of going abroad and we look forward to making every student’s study abroad experience a success.

PRE-DEPARTURE CONTACTS

SITE SPECIALIST: This person has specific knowledge of the program and host city. The Site Specialist knows the ins and outs of the program academics, housing, visa procedures, host city, local culture, transportation, safety and security.

PROGRAM MANAGER: This person oversees the admissions and acceptance process. The Program Manager processes applications, reviews forms and important documents, handles payments and advises on the use of financial aid (if applicable).

REGIONAL DIRECTOR: This person visits campuses across the country, meets students at study abroad fairs and communicates with institutional contacts.

HOME INSTITUTION CONTACT: During planning and participating in an ISA study abroad program, your student will be in contact with many people outside of ISA. These contacts can include home institution study abroad advisors, financial aid counselors, registrar personnel, career services and professors. Communication with these people is vital for a successful study abroad experience as they will be the ones to ensure credit transfer, coordinate funding and advise throughout the process.

ON-SITE STAFF

ISA has a full-time resident staff, on location, that is in constant contact with the ISA US Offices. This team is available to your student for advice and support once abroad. They give students an in-depth orientation known as the Bridging Cultures Program (BCP), coordinate housing, work with our host institutions, hold weekly informational meetings, facilitate cultural activities and accompany students on excursions. They pretty much do it all! The resident staff is available for advising, information on the city or just to chat.

The Bridging Cultures Program (BCP) encompasses the ISA on-site orientation delivered to all students in the first days of their ISA program, with key improvements in areas related to goal setting, intercultural awareness, diversity and professional development. For a number of reasons, the first days that follow a student’s arrival on site offer us some of the best opportunities to effectively transmit information to program participants. While the pre-departure orientations that students receive from ISA and their home universities are also important, students are typically more ready to focus on their study abroad experience when they arrive at their host country. The BCP is designed to help ISA make the most of this important opportunity to educate students, and give students the tools that will facilitate discovery and learning during their program. The BCP is an important introduction to a new culture, a new home and a new experience. The BCP is designed to prepare students for a successful, positive and rewarding experience that will influence the rest of their lives.

Again, welcome to the ISA family! Together, based on our collective experiences, we have created this ISA Family Orientation Guide to assist you in playing an active role in planning and executing a memorable study abroad program. This ISA Family Orientation Guide should be read with the understanding that every program and experience is unique. With this in mind, we hope it will serve to assist both you and your student through the various important phases of studying abroad.

"I can hardly find the words to say what it meant to feel assured that there was someone along the way who would be looking out for my daughter. One of the reasons she chose ISA for her study abroad program was she felt that your organization would provide good on-site support. She certainly chose wisely."

“I want to commend ISA as an organization and study abroad program. As a parent I have been so pleased with ISA. The whole experience has been very professional and excellent.... the application process, the visa process, the initial meeting and travel that she had with your staff in Spain, the Málaga office, the excursions. There are many study abroad programs out there, but I’ve been glad to recommend ISA to a number of families already. We have had a wonderful experience and my daughter has had an incredible semester in Spain.”

STUDENT DEPARTS FOR THE ADVENTURE OF A LIFETIME!

THINGS YOUR STUDENT SHOULD HAVE DONE BEFORE THEIR ISA ACCEPTANCE:
- Contact home institution about their study abroad process and credit transfer
- Begin financial aid/scholarship process (if applicable)
- Apply for a passport
- Familiarize themselves with entry/visa requirements (if applicable)

In case of a student emergency abroad, parents will need a valid passport to travel. Please take into consideration the ample processing time needed for any passport applications or renewals.
Culture Shock is a normal process that occurs as one leaves their home culture and enters another. As defined in the Education Abroad Glossary, published by The Forum on Education Abroad, culture shock is:

The anxiety and feelings (of surprise, disorientation, confusion, etc.) one feels coming into contact with an entirely different social environment, such as a different country. It often relates to the temporary inability to assimilate the new culture, causing difficulty in knowing what is appropriate and what is not.

It is important for students to acknowledge culture shock when it happens and respond positively to the process. One way students can lessen the severity of culture shock is by taking a step back to observe their own traditions and customs, as well as familiarize themselves with their new host culture prior to going abroad. By observing the differences, your student can learn to understand what to expect and not be as “shocked” by the differences they will experience once abroad. Taking a deeper look at the traditions and peculiarities of your own culture aids in the understanding that just because a way of living is different, does not necessarily mean it is better or worse, just different.

Culture shock is not only a process that occurs when going abroad, but also when returning home. This is referred to as reverse culture shock and can be just as challenging as the initial culture shock. Upon return, a student may experience difficulties in returning to their previous routine. This is a normal part of the re-entry process that students may experience due to the fact that they have learned to live and identify with another culture. It is therefore important for the student, family and friends to be aware of the challenges that reverse culture shock can impose on everyday life.

The following resources have additional information and activities about culture shock and reverse culture shock to help prepare students for these processes:

University of California Education Abroad Program Student Guide: Cultural Adjustment

SAFETI Adaptation of Peace Corps Document: Maintaining Strong Mental and Emotional Health

As previously stated, the phenomenon of culture shock is commonly experienced by individuals when they travel and immerse themselves in a new place and culture. The misunderstanding of this process can lead to communication problems and potentially compound frustrations felt while abroad. Therefore, understanding culture shock and how to respond to it are vital in communicating effectively and enabling your student to have a successful experience abroad.

Many students express the symptoms or feelings of culture shock in their communications with home, as this represents their connection to a familiar culture. In some cases, the symptoms of culture shock can be misinterpreted by family members and friends as an indication that the student is truly struggling and in need of assistance. In most instances, however, this is not the case as the student is only expressing normal sentiments that occur during an extremely valuable learning, immersion and growing process.

Every student needs time to learn about and adapt to their host culture and become comfortable with their new environment. This process of experiencing, internalizing and accepting cultural differences is unique to each student and may take some students more time than others, but it is a normal and healthy process. It is important to understand that going through this process is vital for a positive immersion experience and a successful study abroad program overall.

If your student is expressing discontent and frustration (remember this is a normal and expected process), remind them that they have a support system right there on site. Encourage them to speak with our staff abroad as they understand the complexities of the host culture, interact with international students on a daily basis and can assist by giving advice on how to best adapt and enjoy the host culture. When communicating with your student, take into consideration that your student’s response will likely reflect your attitude and reaction to their emotions and concerns.

Along the same lines, you may want to consider shifting the types of questions you are asking your student in order to generate a more productive conversation. Open-ended questions such as “How are you?” can be difficult to answer for a student dealing with the complex nature of culture shock. Inquiries such as “How are you today on your walk home?” or “Have you gone back to that pastry shop you went to with your host mom on the first day?” can serve to remind your student of all the exciting things happening around them, and how they now fit into that picture. With all of this in mind, use the information above to continue providing them with support and positive reinforcement as they face the challenges of culture shock.

REMINDER: This is a once in a lifetime experience… your student should face each day with a positive attitude and an open mind!
COMMUNICATION WHILE YOUR STUDENT IS ABROAD

Effective communication between the student and their family and friends back home is one of the most important elements for a successful study abroad experience.

As you probably have already experienced when your student headed off to college, they are embarking on a voyage of independence and growth. This time abroad will prove to be a tremendous opportunity to gain independence and learn about themselves. That being said, you may face a new set of challenges corresponding with your student while they are abroad. Together, you will want to find the delicate balance between staying in touch and allowing for a positive immersion process for your student.

Having a constant connection to home, and using this as a crutch, can prevent your student from fully engaging in the immersion process in their new host culture. This can have a harmful overall effect and may actually worsen the symptoms of culture shock by increasing your student’s feelings of homesickness. This lack of integration could hinder them from developing strong relationships and connections with new people and friends abroad. Furthermore, it is important to consider how the advent of the internet, and especially the smart phone, has changed the study abroad experience. Where just 10 years ago a student might have called home once a week, or even month, students are now often in touch with home several times a day through various mediums. Although it is comforting for families to be able to check in with their student when they are so far away, we strongly recommend that students and families limit such close contact.

We have found that it is useful to create a prearranged communication schedule, utilizing various methods of communication, to positively interact and keep up to date with your student abroad. Of course, each student and situation is unique, but we have found that starting out with being in touch a few times per week is useful and effective. This allows students the opportunity to experience and immerse themselves in their new culture, effectively processing and internalizing the experiences they are having. Formulating a basic communication schedule can give both you and your student something to look forward to.

Keep in mind, your student may consider something as simple as posting on a blog or commenting on Facebook to be valid methods of communication.

REMINDER: A very small percentage of U.S. college students get the opportunity to study abroad, so encourage your student to make a global network of friends - MEET LOCALS!

"We were really impressed by your program and would highly recommend it to any student thinking about studying abroad!"

Linda C., Parent of UCLA Student

"When a child travels abroad alone without knowing anyone, it can be a little scary. Staying five weeks away makes it only more nerve racking. When a child does this with ISA it should give parents a sense of peace. The student will be not just O.K., but great! There are not enough words to express how pleased and impressed I am with your organization. My daughter graded her experience A+! I think that says it all."

Ana V., Parent of Loyola University Student
COMMUNICATION CONTINUED

METHODS OF COMMUNICATION:

Despite recent advancements in global communication technologies, long-distance communication still has its challenges. Please keep in mind that the methods of communication listed below may not work as well or be as efficient as you and your student are used to here in the United States (i.e. Internet around the world tends to be slower than services available in the U.S.). In addition, it’s important to keep in mind that a text message or Facebook post is often unable to convey the full story. We encourage you to communicate with your student via a medium that allows them to truly explain an issue they are facing before becoming alarmed. Remember that the on-site staff are always nearby and available to assist your student in person, and remind your student to always contact local emergency services and the on-site staff when facing a true emergency.

CELL PHONES (CALLING, TEXTING AND SMARTPHONE APPS)

SKYPE/INSTANT MESSAGING/GOOGLE TALK/GOOGLE VOICE/ICHT

These methods of communication have evolved immensely in the past few years. They are a common and easy way for students to communicate with family and friends back home. These are free internet-based services, many of which also have video chat capabilities.

EMAIL

Email is a great way to communicate about what is happening both abroad and back home. It allows for long, thought-out communications which can be easily read and stored by you and your student.

WRITE A BLOG

Blogging is one of the best ways for everyone to keep up to date. It is also a great way for your student to document the study abroad experience and keep a journal of memories, activities and events. Blogging is also effective in dealing with culture shock, as writing down words and thoughts can be therapeutic, especially knowing that friends and family back home are reading them.

FACEBOOK/SOCIAL MEDIA

Students can post pictures, update their status, easily keep in contact with friends back home as well as connect with new friends abroad. Facebook is a great way for you to also keep up to date on your student’s activities.

Students can post their photos in virtual albums to share with friends and family. This is a great way to make more room on cameras and ensure that photos are saved somewhere safe. Some good examples of photo sharing websites include Flickr, Shutterfly and Picasa.

INTERNET CAFÉS

Internet cafés are very common in most of our sites and are great places for students to pop in and catch up with family and friends.

SNAIL MAIL

Remember, you can always send letters and postcards back and forth through the mail. Your student will love to receive these physical reminders from home as well as share photos and postcards from their travels abroad!

COMMUNICATING WITH YOUR STUDENT DURING A MAJOR SAFETY OR SECURITY EVENT:

It’s important to establish a communication plan with your student in the event of a major safety or security situation such as a political or natural disaster while abroad. Mobile networks can become jammed or experience an outage depending on the event, and alternative methods such as apps and social media can provide a quick, easy way to check-in. Facebook recently launched their Safety Check feature that prompts people in an affected area to check-in as safe. Additionally, students often communicate via WhatsApp, Instagram, Snapchat and Twitter, just to name a few, and may be able to send or post a short message using one of these channels during an emergency. Establish which channel your student is most likely to use, ask them to accept your friend request, and agree to use that channel as an alternate communication method during an emergency. Also, encourage your student to keep you abreast of their travel plans both during and after their program.

“My son had a wonderful time and met some amazing people. He met people that my husband and I believe he will be friends with for the rest of his life. He told us that the ISA staff was so great in seeing that this was an amazing experience for them all. Thank you (and the rest of the staff) for being so supportive and for providing this experience for our son.”

Beth S.,
Parent of Wake Forest University Student

“As a parent, and from my daughter’s prospective as well, your organization was so attentive to both her needs and mine. Your follow ups with some issues of lost luggage, and just overall concern and kindness from her group leaders was just exemplary. Again, thank you so much. We will highly recommend this program.”

Augusta K.,
Parent of Eugene Lang College Student
Throughout your student’s time abroad, it is likely that problems may arise. Problem solving is a part of everyday life and this will be no different when your student is abroad. We encourage you to support your student through any challenges, while remembering to let them solve problems on their own. These experiences can be some of the most significant life-learning experiences, ones you will likely hear stories about for years to come, and your student will be proud of the fact that they solved the problem on their own. Again, problems are to be expected and there is always a solution.

HEALTH AND SAFETY:

Your student is responsible for submitting to ISA the required Medical History, Health Clearance and, if applicable, the Specialist Clearance forms. These documents will be shared with their resident staff and will be referenced in the event medical attention is necessary. The details on these forms are also taken into consideration when assigning housing, establishing academic schedules, coordinating excursions, etc. It is very important that the information provided on these documents is legible, accurate and up to date. If your student faces any new medical updates once these forms have been submitted to ISA, please have them provide the updated information to ISA.

Health and safety will also be a main theme discussed during the on-site orientation and ISA meetings scheduled throughout the program. Within these meetings, ISA resident staff members outline important details such as “do’s and don’ts”, local laws, transportation and pedestrian safety, emergency contact information and facilities, city orientation, cultural norms, and much more.

WHAT IF MY STUDENT HAS A MEDICAL OR SAFETY EMERGENCY?

If your student faces a medical and/or safety emergency at any time, day or night, they should contact their ISA resident staff immediately so that they may assist in arranging medical attention, accompany them to a doctor’s appointment and/or assist with insurance matters. If necessary, your student should also notify local authorities.

In addition to the support provided by their ISA resident staff, we also have a U.S.-based on-call staff member prepared to assist with matters such as insurance and communicating with appropriate family members, as well as the home university.

ISA participants are advised to take a credit card abroad or maintain readily accessible emergency funds of at least $500 in the event that an on-site payment for any medical or other emergency expenses is necessary.

In an extreme emergency situation abroad, please reference your student’s insurance description of coverage found on the ISA Website as emergency reunion and other benefits may apply. The U.S. ISA Office is more than happy to help you with questions about how to proceed with insurance inquiries. In this type of situation you may find it necessary to travel to your student abroad. To do so you will need a valid passport. Please keep in mind it can take between 6-8 weeks to apply for or renew a U.S. passport. This being said, you may want to consider updating or applying for a passport prior to your student’s departure from the U.S.

HOW DOES ISA SHARE INFORMATION IF THERE IS A POLITICAL, NATURAL DISASTER OR OTHER MAJOR SAFETY OR SECURITY EVENT IN MY STUDENT’S PROGRAM LOCATION?

ISA stateside and on-site staff closely monitor local news for each program location. Our Office of Health, Safety and Security regularly reviews information provided by the U.S. Department of State and its Overseas Security Advisory Council (OSAC), the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the World Health Organization and trusted security analysis sources. When an event that affects an entire program location occurs, information and instructions are first disseminated to affected students, then we will post a message to the Worldwide Alerts page on our website. You can access the Worldwide Alerts page here or by clicking on the Worldwide Alerts button on the right-hand side of our home page.

WHAT IF THERE IS AN EMERGENCY AT HOME AND I NEED TO GET A HOLD OF MY STUDENT?

Please call an ISA U.S. office. If your call is after normal business hours, you will be provided with the ISA emergency phone number. An ISA representative who is trained with the appropriate emergency protocol will be available 24/7 to assist as necessary. Please respect this emergency line. If it is not a true emergency, please do not call this line after normal business hours (Monday to Thursday, 7am–7pm and Friday, 8am–5pm CST).

IF MY STUDENT NEEDS TO SEEK MEDICAL ATTENTION WHILE ABROAD, WILL THEY HAVE MEDICAL INSURANCE COVERAGE?

Blanket Accident & Sickness Policy is included in the price of the ISA program and covers the program participant while abroad for the official on-site period of the program. A description of coverage and information about how to file a claim are available on our website. If your student needs to visit a clinic/hospital while abroad, or is in an emergency situation, they should notify their ISA resident staff and local authorities (if applicable) as soon as possible.

If your student plans on traveling before or after their program, they can contact their Program Manager to discuss purchasing extra insurance to cover that additional time frame.

REMINDER: If your student is experiencing health and safety concerns, they need to approach their ISA resident staff. If your student does not inform their on-site staff about their concerns, ISA will not be aware that our extra assistance is needed.
FINANCES:

WHAT HAPPENS IF THE DISBURSEMENT OF FINANCIAL AID IS DELAYED?
In most cases, the financial aid award package is disbursed as scheduled. However, there are instances when the disbursement of funds is delayed. If this happens to your student, encourage them to contact their home university financial aid office right away in hopes of determining when the funds will in fact be released. They should then inform their ISA Program Manager of this adjustment. The Program Manager will likely request your student’s Verification of Award (VOA) form be updated to reflect this new information.

If an adjustment to the overall award package amount has occurred, your student must notify ISA right away and make immediate payment for any amount that will not be covered by their previously submitted VOA. If your student has any questions about this process, please encourage them to contact their ISA Program Manager.

ISA’s Verification of Award form (VOA) is available only to students using financial aid to pay for their ISA program. This document is located within your student’s ISA Student Portal and should be completed by your student and their home university’s financial aid office. This document is due back to ISA by the final forms and payment due date.

HOW SHOULD MY STUDENT PROTECT THEIR FINANCIAL AND PERSONAL INFORMATION WHILE ABROAD?
Your student should make multiple copies of all cards and forms of identification (front and back) within their wallet. One set of these copies should be provided to a trusted friend or family member, and the other stored in a safe place within their housing while abroad. Your student may also want to share their bank account details with a trusted friend or family member in the event they need emergency funds deposited or transferred into their account. Your student should notify their bank and all credit card companies of travel dates and locations.

WHAT IF THEIR WALLET IS LOST OR STOLEN?
Your student should access the copies they have previously made of the items in their wallet to obtain credit/debit card contact information. Have your student notify their bank and credit card companies immediately to have any cards cancelled or placed on hold. Your student should also notify their ISA resident staff as they can assist with next steps such as filing a police report. If necessary, the ISA resident staff can discuss options for acquiring emergency funds.

HOW SHOULD MY STUDENT PROTECT THEIR PERSONAL BELONGINGS ABROAD?
Students are encouraged not to bring expensive or irreplaceable items abroad. ISA strongly encourages students to secure insurance to cover the personal belongings they do bring with them. This may be arranged through independent travel insurance, and some homeowners or renters policies may also cover goods while abroad. Students should check coverage through existing policies to see if additional coverage is needed. ISA is not responsible for any damaged, stolen or lost property belonging to students.
What if my student has an issue with housing?

It is possible your student may experience housing conflicts while abroad and realistically, they have also probably witnessed similar conflicts in their housing at their home university. That being said, there is a resolution.

The following are some common examples of housing issues and helpful ways for them to be resolved:

HOMESTAY CONFLICTS: It is our hope that your student’s homestay experience (if applicable) will be one of the best attributes of their entire time abroad. This integration will ideally provide your student with a unique window and access to the host culture. If your student finds themselves in conflict with members of their host family, please encourage them to approach the host family to discuss the concern. In most cases, conflicts can be attributed to a simple cultural misunderstanding, an element that is lost in translation. Often, as a result, both student and host family walk away with a better understanding of the other’s culture. If your student continues to have difficulties within their homestay accommodations, their next step is to approach their ISA resident staff to further discuss a resolution to the matter.

ROOMMATE CONFLICTS: Frustrating as they may be, your student should approach the issue with a mature and respectful attitude. It is important for you and your student to also keep in mind that all parties are going through an adjustment process when learning to live among new people and new cultures. Encourage your student to first communicate with their roommate(s) about any conflict. If an agreed upon resolution is not met, they should then communicate their concerns with their ISA resident staff who can assist as mediators to the conflict at hand. Again, if the ISA resident staff is not aware of the conflicts your student is experiencing, they cannot extend their assistance.

FOOD CONCERNS: Many ISA accommodations include meals. If your student has specific dietary needs, please be sure they outline those needs/requests on their ISA Housing Questionnaire. If living in a homestay, once on site your student will want to communicate food likes and dislikes with their host family. If your student expresses a concern about the meals being provided, they should first communicate their concern with their host family. If your student’s concerns persist, they should contact their ISA resident staff.

Your student should already be aware that depending on their program location and housing selection, the ability to accommodate specific food preferences will vary.

REMINDER: Sharing meals and culinary traditions are great insights into another culture. Your student should take advantage of these opportunities to further learn about their host community. For example, your student can offer to cook their host family a “traditional” American dinner, or request to accompany the host family when shopping, preparing and cooking the meals. This is a rewarding and collaborative way to share the culinary experience.
MISCELEANEOUS:

What if my student loses their passport?

If your student loses their passport while abroad they must report it to authorities immediately. ISA resident staff will be able to provide your student with the contact information for the local consulate/embassy and assist with the application process for a replacement passport. Please note your student will not be able to legally travel across international borders without a valid passport. If your student does not have their passport at the time of an international ISA excursion, they will not be permitted to attend.

We advise students to have an accessible copy of their passport and visa (if applicable) for the duration of their travels, as well as provide a trusted friend or family member with a copy. Please be aware that if your student was issued a visa for their program, it was likely affixed within their passport. The copies made will assist with the process of applying for a new passport (and visa) in the event it is lost or stolen.

Passport information as well as consular and embassy contact information is also available on the ISA Website.

What if my student is homesick?

It is likely that your student will experience some degree of homesickness while abroad. Please keep in mind that other students are likely experiencing these feelings as well. While these feelings can be short or long lived, your student should look to their roommates, peers and ISA resident staff for support and encouragement through this challenging time.

Homesickness can be a common part of culture shock. Please reference the Culture Shock 101 section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide for a further description and ways to respond.

REMINDER: This is a once in a lifetime experience for your student, and it will be over before they know it! Encourage your student to get out and about to explore their host city, make new friends and, in general, make the most of their time abroad!

How can I ensure my student’s expectations will be met while abroad?

In reality, there are many expectations that your student may have that will not be met while abroad. Therefore, it is important to reiterate to your student that it is okay if these realities are different than initially assumed. Different doesn’t mean worse. Acknowledging and adjusting to these realities will lead to your student’s personal growth as well as sense of independence and accomplishment.

While ISA does its best to prepare your student for their time abroad, nothing will compare to the reality of your student experiencing, learning and understanding their host culture first hand – the joy of traveling!
PRE-DEPARTURE TALKING POINTS

Congratulations on getting your student this far in their academic and professional career! Now that they are preparing to go abroad, there are many things they will want to take into consideration. Such topics may include anything from blogging and banking to culture and credits. Please keep in mind that this can be a very stressful time for your student, and if they’ve never been abroad before, they may not have thought about these essential topics, let alone have the answers right away. That’s to be expected and is why we have provided a suggested list of “talking points” to guide you through useful conversations with your student leading up to the start of their program.

We have found that these talking points facilitate helpful conversations to prepare your student for their upcoming program abroad. Use these as a way to better understand your student’s goals for, as well as the realities of, their fast-approaching international experience.

REMINDER: Much of the information needed for these discussions can be found in the ISA Site-Specific Online Orientation available in your student’s online ISA Student Portal. As a reminder, some sections will not become available until the final forms due date.

CULTURE & CULTURAL AWARENESS:

“How have you heard of culture shock?” Refer to the Culture Shock 101 section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide.

“How do you anticipate coping with culture shock?” Refer to the Culture Shock 101 section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide.

“What are the gender roles in the host country?”

“What are the cultural norms (religion, politics, gender, social, etc.)?”

COMMUNICATION:

“We were really impressed by your program and would highly recommend it to any student thinking about studying abroad!”

Linda C., Parent of UCLA Student

Refer to the Communication While Your Student is Abroad section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide for additional information to help answer the following questions.

“How do you plan to document your time abroad?” Blog, journaling, photo sharing, etc.

“How will you stay in touch?” Phone, email, Skype, Google Voice, Google Talk, Facebook, Twitter, etc.

“How often and by what means will you communicate with friends/family at home?” Refer to the Communication While Your Student is Abroad section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide.

“How much time do you plan on communicating with friends/family at home?” Your student’s time abroad will fly by. Just think, two hours spent on Skype is two hours your student missed out on enjoying their host city...yikes!

Furthermore, consider how quickly time adds up when you factor in how smart phones make being connected easier than ever! Typical daily activities for today’s study abroad student might include 30 minutes on Facebook and Instagram while on the metro, 15 minutes talking on the phone walking to class, 30 minutes Skyping later that evening, and another 60 minutes watching US TV shows online before bed.

Days abroad x hours spent communicating with home = days not exploring their host community!

35 day summer program (5 weeks) x 2 hrs/day = 70 hours or 3 full days
90 day semester program (13 weeks) x 2 hrs/day = 180 hours or a full week!

Keep in mind this doesn’t include the time they spend sleeping, eating, attending class, etc.

“In case of an emergency, what is the communication plan?” Refer to the Anticipating and Responding to Problems Abroad section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide.

EXPECTATIONS & GOALS:

“What are your expectations for housing, transportation and food?”

“What are your goals for your time abroad?”
For example, language acquisition, cultural immersion, professional experience, volunteering, etc.

“How will you accomplish these goals?”
For example, they can ask resident staff about language exchange partners, attend community events within their neighborhood, get involved with local clubs and organizations or ask ISA if it’s possible to add a volunteer or internship placement to their program.

“How will you measure these goals?”
For example, they can take a language placement exam before and after the program, keep a journal or document their cultural experiences, update their résumé and record volunteer hours and accomplishments.

“What do you anticipate being your biggest challenge during your time abroad?”

HEALTH & SAFETY:

“Have you looked on a map to familiarize yourself with the city, office, school, etc?” Students will be notified of their housing address 2-4 weeks prior to departure and can plug this address into the map to begin exploring their new neighborhood abroad.

“Are you planning to continue any medication while you are abroad?”

“Is the medication legal/recognized in the host country? Can you get your medications there or will you be required to bring enough for the entire duration of your program?”

“How do you plan to prepare yourself for a safety incident?” Refer to the Anticipating and Responding to Problems Abroad section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide.

“Do you know the local laws?” This is a great opportunity for your student to do some independent research to better familiarize themselves with their host country. For example, pepper spray is banned in some countries.

“How do you plan to avoid unwanted attention or unsafe situations?” For example, they should try to blend in and look like a local, avoid public gatherings and protests, travel in small groups, etc.

“How do you plan to stay safe while pursing travels independent of ISA?” For example, they should carry a local map and language dictionary, know where the U.S. Embassy and police stations are located, and be up-to-date on current events.

“How do you plan to stay up-to-date with current events in neighboring countries as well as world news?” Check the U.S. Department of State Website for current travel warnings as well as global news media for world updates.

“If your purse or wallet is lost or stolen, what will you do?” Refer to the Anticipating and Responding to Problems Abroad section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide.
ACADEMICS & CAMPUS LIFE:

“How have you communicated with your home university about how your international credits will transfer back and affect your home institution GPA? Does your home university academic department hold any grade/course requirements that you must fulfill while abroad?” Refer to the Anticipating and Responding to Problems Abroad section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide.

“Does your home university and/or academic department require additional paperwork or documentation to evaluate courses taken and credits earned abroad?” Refer to the Anticipating and Responding to Problems Abroad section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide.

“How have you made any necessary arrangements for your return to your home university?” For example, they will want to secure housing accommodations, course registration, tuition payments, financial aid applications, transcript processing, graduation requirements, etc.

FINANCES:

“Are you budgeting for extra/optional weekend trips?”

“Do you plan to use a credit and/or debit card while abroad? If yes, will you use your credit/debit cards on a daily basis or for emergencies only?” Have your student notify their bank and credit card companies of their travel plans in order to avoid holds being placed on their accounts or cards being cancelled.

“Do you plan to acquire host country currency prior to going abroad? How much money (U.S. Dollars and host country currency) do you plan to travel with?” Large banks will exchange or order foreign currency with proper notice, and currency exchange offices located at international airports can also exchange most major currencies.

“I wanted to thank you for the wonderful experience my daughter had in Barcelona. It was a dream trip for her. Thanks for all your help with the paperwork and working with us on the finances.”

Allison M., Parent of University of Utah Student

“My son is studying in Málaga, Spain, and having the time of his life. ISA is an amazing program and we are so grateful for all the help and arrangements made on his behalf.”

Hayley B., Pittsburg State University

“Make the most of every situation no matter how tired you may seem at times. Time flies and it’s not very likely you’ll be able to experience anything like this again.”

Thomas O., Parent of UCLA Student

HELPFUL TIPS FOR VISITING YOUR STUDENT

Please note that ISA does not make any travel arrangements for families who are visiting their students abroad. The following is merely a suggested list of resources for you to utilize in the event you plan a trip to visit your student.

HOW TO BEGIN PLANNING

Have your student help plan your visit! If possible, wait to make arrangements until they have arrived on site. At that time they will have already gone through the planning of their own trip abroad, and once they are living in their new host city, they will be able to provide you with personal recommendations.

WHEN TO VISIT

Work around your student’s class schedule (he/she is studying abroad). They will get their confirmed academic schedule and excursion dates once they arrive on site. We recommend planning a visit around a long break or at the end of the program. We do not recommend visiting at the beginning of your student’s program as it is important for them to be able to take this first step on their own. The beginning of your student’s program is quite busy with ISA Bridging Cultures Program activities, excursions, making new friends and many other new experiences.

ACCOMMODATIONS

Due to liability reasons, ISA arranged housing is for ISA students only. Family and friends visiting students abroad will therefore need to arrange for their own accommodations. Your student and their ISA resident staff can offer hotel recommendations, however, there are also numerous online booking resources that you should explore (i.e. booking.com, hotels.com).

TRANSPORTATION

Public transportation (taxi, train, subway, bus, etc.) is often much more prevalent in other countries, and is used regularly for travel within and between cities. While rental cars are often an available option, they are usually not the most efficient means of seeing your student’s host country. If you do choose to rent a car abroad, be sure to contact your insurance company regarding necessary or recommended coverage. An international driver’s license may be required.

SIGHT-SEEING

We encourage you to let your student be your personal tour guide; they will want to show off their new host city and what they have learned since being abroad! It’s a good idea to familiarize yourself with your destination’s culture and customs (tipping, etiquette, taboo topics, current events, etc). Lastly, please note that ISA organized excursions are arranged for ISA students only.

HEALTH AND SAFETY

Be sure to obtain any necessary vaccinations for the country or areas you may visit: wwwnc.cdc.gov/travel/destinations/list.aspx#B

Check for any applicable U.S. State Department Travel Warnings and/or Alerts: travel.state.gov/content/passports/en/alertswarnings.html

It is also a good idea to register yourself with the U.S. Embassy in the country you will be visiting.

BANKING

Consider bringing a money belt with you to protect your valuables (cash, credit/debit cards, passport, etc.) from pickpockets as you travel. Be sure to notify your bank(s) before you travel abroad as some banks may put a hold on your account(s) if they suspect fraudulent activity. Decide if you will obtain some local currency in cash by exchanging ahead of time (at a local bank or international airport) or if you will obtain currency once you arrive.

Please note that although credit cards are becoming increasingly more common, many restaurants, stores, etc. in other countries may only accept cash as a means of payment. MasterCard and Visa are usually the most welcomed credit card types abroad. You may also want to ask your bank or credit card company about any international exchange and/or transaction fees.

PACKING LIST FOR FAMILY VISITING STUDENTS

In addition to the items listed below, we also suggest you reference the Packing Lists section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide.

- Passport
- Tourist Visa (if applicable)
- Your own traveler’s phrase book or language dictionary for translation assistance (if applicable)
- A care package for your student, possibly with items they may miss from home (i.e. peanut butter, specific toiletry brands, etc.)
- Consider bringing an extra suitcase or saving space in your suitcase to bring back items that your student either no longer needs (i.e. winter clothes if you visit halfway through the spring semester) or did not find necessary once they arrived
- Check weather forecasts prior to your visit to pack accordingly

REMINDER: During your visit, try to balance seeing local sites with taking some time to relax and soak up all that is around you. Keep in mind, something as simple as spending an afternoon at a local café with
As referenced in the Culture Shock 101 section of this ISA Family Orientation Guide, reverse culture shock is a very normal and common process that occurs when students return home from abroad. The impact of reverse culture shock is not necessarily related to the length of time spent abroad or the destination. When students return to the U.S., their emotions and reactions will vary and may include one or more of the following:

- Feelings of restlessness, boredom, depression, uncertainty, confusion, or isolation
- Reverse homesickness: Missing the people, places, attitudes or lifestyles of their host country
- Changes in career, academic and social goals and priorities
- Negativity or intolerance towards their home culture including common behaviors, attitudes and customs
- Frustrations with common work, social and academic practices on-campus
- Difficulty relating to and communicating with friends who haven’t shared the same experience

When your student returns from abroad, it is helpful for them to find outlets to cope with the challenges of reverse culture shock. There are many ways for them to stay connected with the time they spent abroad, enabling them to build upon their international experience. The following suggestions/activities are ways for your student to overcome the challenges associated with reverse culture shock, while also incorporating their international experience into their future academic, personal and professional goals. A large investment of both time and money has been made to enable your student to experience this unique opportunity and we encourage them to maximize this investment. Just because your student has returned from abroad, doesn’t mean the study abroad experience, and benefits gained from it, have ended… it’s really just the beginning.

WAYS TO BUILD UPON ACADEMIC GOALS:

- Add a minor or concentration to their academic degree using the credits they earned while abroad.
- Use their international experience to apply for grants and scholarships for which they may now be eligible.
- Study abroad again! ISA Repeat Student Grant may be applicable.
- Continue your education by completing a master’s degree abroad through an ISA Degrees Abroad program.
- Volunteer or intern internationally with ISA Internships & Service-Learning.
- Give presentations about their experience (i.e. to classmates, student organizations, fraternities/sororities, faculty members, local schools, church groups, after-school programs, community based organizations, etc.).
- Join or start a student club or organization (language clubs, international student club, study abroad returnee organization).
- Include their international experience on graduate school applications.

RECALL:

There are many offices and resources available on your student’s home university campus to further assist with maximizing the study abroad experience. Upon return, encourage your student to reach out to the study abroad and international offices, writing center, financial aid office, career center, community outreach office, academic advisor, language lab and faculty members. These resources are at your student’s finger tips!

WAYS TO BUILD UPON PERSONAL GOALS:

- Subscribe to international publications (Glimpse, online host country/city newspaper, National Geographic, NAFSA, the Economist, BBC news feeds, etc.)
- Practice language skills (volunteer with community organizations as a translator or language tutor).
- Skype, Facebook and exchange letters, postcards or emails with friends, families and staff from their time abroad.
- Join ISA Facebook pages.
- Follow ISA Twitter.
- Review our blogs or write their own.

WAYS TO BUILD UPON PROFESSIONAL GOALS:

- Become an ISA Global Ambassador (on-campus internship).
- Volunteer with their Study Abroad Office on-campus.
- Integrate their international experience into their résumé and LinkedIn profile and focus on how they are going to highlight their experience in job interviews (include specifics such as personal growth, managing group dynamics, problem solving, crisis management, etc.).
- Seek out international organizations, restaurants, events and festivals in their community (a great way to network and survey job opportunities).
